Trade unions, austerity and the general election

Day & time:

Venue:

Workers in Britain face the longest squeeze on living standards since the 1850s. Before voting for politicians on 7 May we should be asking what they are going to do to reverse this assault.

The recent election of Syriza in Greece shows that there is an alternative to austerity. Trade unionists need their own agenda during the election period. Who will stop the attacks on public services, wages and pensions? Which party is prepared to tackle the anti union laws?

Come and join the debate about how we can shape the agenda in the 2015 election.
